WHY TO OPEN GOLD ACCOUNT?

Gold is the ultimate form of money and the perfect hedge

Unlike paper currency, coins or other assets, gold has maintained its value throughout the ages. People see gold as a way to pass on and preserve their wealth from one generation to the next

Weakness of the U.S. Dollar

Although the U.S. dollar is one of the world's most important stores of value its day in the sun is fading. The dollar has falling against every major currencies. this often prompts people to want the security gold offers, which raises gold prices. The price of gold nearly tripled between 1998 and 2008, reaching the $1,000 an ounce milestone in early 2008. The decline in the U.S. dollar occurred for a number of reasons, including the country's large budget and trade deficits and as money supply increase the value of the dollar will decrease

Inflation

Gold has historically been an excellent hedge against inflation, because its price tends to rise when the cost of living increases. Since World War II, the five years in which U.S. inflation was at its highest were 1946, 1974, 1975, 1979 and 1980. During those five years, the average real return on the Dow was -12.33%, compared to 130.4% for gold

Deflation

Deflation, a period in which prices contract, business activity slows and the economy is burdened by excessive debt, has not been seen globally since the Great Depression of the 1930s. During that time, the relative purchasing power of gold soared while other prices dropped sharply

Geopolitical Uncertainty

Gold retains its value not only in times of financial uncertainty, but in times of geopolitical uncertainty. It is often called the "crisis commodity", because people flee to its relative safety when world tensions rise; during such times, it often outperforms other investments. For example, gold prices experienced some of their largest recent movements during periods of tension with Iran and Iraq in 2007 and 2008. Its price often rises the most when confidence in governments is low

Supply & Demand

Much of the supply of gold in the market since the 1990s has come from sales of gold bullion from the vaults of global central banks. This selling by global central banks slowed greatly in 2008. production of new gold from mines has been on the decline since 2000. The annual gold mining output fell from 2,573 metric tons in 2000 to 2,444 metric tons in 2007. It can take from five to 10 years to bring a new mine into production. As a general rule, reduction in the supply of gold increases gold prices

Financial Confidence

Gold alone creates financial confidence, independent of Wall St. Unlike other traditional paper investments gold will not file bankruptcy, it will not go out of business, nor does it need a bailout or stimulus package

Gold vs. Real Estate: Which Should You Own?

Gold pays no interest. At least properties pay you rent. Therefore you should own properties right? That's the conventional wisdom.

Yes the first two statements are true. But we need to be careful about drawing the conclusion that you should own rental properties. Now is one of those rare times in history where "even after collecting rent" holding real estate will cost you more than holding gold. Real Estate is crashing and will continue to head towards a bottom that no one can pin point.

Things We Know

1. Dollar has lost over 41% over the last 8 years and is trending lower. It's real Simple: As they print more Dollars the supply grows and value of the Dollar drops.
2. Oil prices are climbing back towards it's all time high and looking like there is no top or slowing in sight. In fact energy analysts can not even explain the recent rise in the oil price. There is no pick up in the US economic activity and there is no massive drain on the supplies.
3. The Stock market is netting you a "fat" return of 6% or less per year on average (refer back to #1...do the math: 41% divided by 8 years, and factor in inflation...get the point?)

Conclusion

Yes, gold pays no interest. It's one of the many knocks against gold. But don't forget, its been one of the best investments in the last ten years and the cost of owning gold is darn near zero.

Right now rental yields are lower now than at any time in history – by a wide margin. That affects you as an investor because it puts you in a negative cash flow position meaning that you have more money going out than you do coming in. There's 2,000 years of history to show that gold is the best thing to own during bad inflationary times.
